Southern Sayings

Visitors to the J. Jackson home last week were Mrs. J. Hearn of Hardisty who was helping Mrs. Jackson with the wedding supper. Other visitors were Mrs. Rose Strommore of Olds, Alta., and visitors this week were Mr. Joe Harding and son of Jarrow, Mr. Stan Murray of Wainwright.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Reber and family and Mrs. W. E. Reber of Hardisty were Sunday visitors at Mr. and Mrs. R. Reber's and family last Sunday.

Congratulations go to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thompson, nee Amy Wiese, of Victoria, B.C., on the birth of a daughter, Evelyn Ann (Lynn). Congratulations also go to grandpa and grandma Wiese on their first grandchild.

Quite a lot of flu and colds are going around the district again. Mrs. M. Creasey and Mrs. Roy Reber were both down with it over the week-end.

Despite the wind and snow, folks are still combining and doing some threshing.

Glen-Coa Gleanings

October 18 marked the Golden Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Lewis. The family went to Edmonton on Saturday last to have a photo taken. Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Lovig on this very special occasion.

Miss Arlene Steffensen has completed her dietician's course at the University hospital and is home for a short holiday before going to Saskatoon where she has a position awaiting her at the Sanatorium there. Best wishes are extended.

Lawrence Likness had the good fortune to be chosen to represent the E.L.C. Seminary at a Seminar at Gettysburg, Penn. He left last Sunday travelling by train via Toronto, Niagara, Buffalo, N.Y.

No, we don't like it at all—that is the weather. But there's nothing we can do about it as usual so we might as well be cheerful. Pollyanna style we can be thankful it's no worse. Some are managing to get threshed and combined and hope everyone will get finished in time.

Wedding Bells

BARTHALOW — JACKSON

On the afternoon of Wednesday, October 17 the Irma United Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Isabella Miron, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Jackson of Irma, became the bride of Chester Howard Barthallow, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Barthallow of Olds.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. W. Inglis. Miss Jennene Archibald played the wedding music and ushering the guests were Arthur Jackson and Jack MacKay.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a lovely gown of white satin featuring an embroidered bodice with sweetheart neckline, lily point sleeves and a full skirt. Her finger ring was held in place by a closely pleated coronet of net and pearls and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Floyd Hinecker as matron of honor and Miss Lorna Archibald as bridesmaid had chosen similarly styled taffeta dresses in pale blue and pale mauve respectively. These were complemented by matching lace mittens and chapel veils with bandeaux of roses. Their bouquets consisted of pink and white carnations.

The bridegroom's attendants were Albert and Eddie Jackson.

Following the ceremony a reception for 110 guests was held in Keifer's hall which had been decorated for the occasion with potted plants and pinwheels and white wedding bells and streamers.

The bride's mother received her guests in a gown of aqua whispering taffeta with a corsage of red roses.

The bride's table was laid with a very lovely cloth and centerpiece which had graced the wedding table of Mr. and Mrs. J. Dushar some 30 years ago and was centred by a large three-tiered wedding cake.

The toast to the bride was proposed by the Rev. H. W. Inglis.

Following the reception, a wedding dance which was widely attended, was held in Keifer's hall. Leaving for a honeymoon trip to Waterton Lakes the bride chose a navy blue suit with grey accents. On their return the happy couple will make their home at Holden.

Out of town guests were Mr. Geo. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Swanson and Mr. John Armitage, all of Sedgewick; Mr. and Mrs. T. Shaw Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Arnie Myrland of Wainwright; Mrs. Rose Strommore, sister of the groom from Olds; Mr. and Mrs. Armitage, Billy and Betty from Kinrossa; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Harding and grandson, Kinrossa; Rev. Leo Thurston, Ashmont; Mrs. J. Hearn, Hardisty, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Hinecker of Edmonton.

Mrs. Noggins Buys A Bond...

By Bruce Hutchison

My good neighbour, Mrs. Noggins, who was born in London, was telling me today that she had increased her stake in Canada, by the purchase of another government savings bond.

"Not that I like savin', you understand," she said. "I'd rather spend; but the vice of savin' has got into me. Savin' is the great Canadian vice. Canadians saved up enough to build the railways and the cities and the hospitals and all like that, and if it wasn't for savin' we'd be back where we was at the beginning like the Indians who never saved nothing. We'd be comfortable and happy again in a wigwam, no taxes, no government, and usually not enough to eat either."

"That was the good life all right, but I doubt we're worthy of it now-a-days. We're too wedded to warm houses and meals, reg'lar. But if we stop savin' we can get back to the good old days by wot they call hinfation. A lot of countries like the Romans 'ave hinfation, they themselves clean out of business and solved all their problems overnight."

"Nobody knows that better than Uncle Joe in Moscow. The other day, they say, old Joe exploded another atom bomb, but 'e don't count on that kind of thing because we've got more of 'em, and bigger. No, sir, Joe is watchin' the bomb of hinfation tickin' right 'ere and it costs 'im nothink but a little 'ollow laughter. But we can't build one bomb, or a tank or a gun or a soldier's boots without savin' the stuff that goes into 'em. It's very expensive and unpleasant but I dare say it's better to save ourselves that way than to be saved by Joe and 'is boys."

"The Russians are great savers. There the government don't ask people to buy bonds, no nonsense like that. It tells 'em wot to save and if they don't like it they're given the good life up in the salt mines of Siberia, but it doesn't last long. Over 'ere the government relies on our common sense, which isn't too common. You take George Pudding, frinstance, and 'is farm down the road, George told me today 'e wasn't goin' to buy no bond because 'e don't believe in 'em. All that stuff, 'e says, is heconomics and we done a lot better in this country before we hinfanted heconomics. Yes, I says, and we done all right before we 'ad bath rooms but I kind of like a nice 'ot soak on Saturday nights."

"And, I says to George, you done all right before you got your tractor. Wot's that got to do with it, says George. I bought the tractor myself, the government didn't buy it for me. Those boys in Ottawa with the long 'air don't 'ave to tell me 'ow to run my farm. Well, I says, 'ow did you buy the farm and the tractor in the first place? I paid for 'em, of course, says George, and it took a long time on a mortgage. In other words, I says, 'ad they did up for 'em."

"You might call it that, says George, but that's my private business. With a government it's different, 'e says. "A government don't 'ave to save nothing. It can print all the money it likes so long as the ink and paper 'olds out, without askin' me to buy no bonds."

"That's the government's affair, not mine," 'e says, so let the government leave me be, I've got my 'ands full tryin' to buy that forty acres on the other side of the 'ill. That will take all my money for the next ten years, 'e says, without the government interferin'.

"And if the government would only print more money 'e says, instead of borrowin' mine, maybe I'd lay my 'ands on some of it and buy the land all the sooner. They ort to be givin' me more money instead of takin' it away from a poor man."

"That's the government's affair, not mine," 'e says, so let the government leave me be, I've got my 'ands full tryin' to buy that forty acres on the other side of the 'ill. That will take all my money for the next ten years, 'e says, without the government interferin'.

"Okay, I says—for I do henjoy a hargument with old George—if they print a lot more money and it's worth a lot less, 'ow much, I says, do you think those forty acres or a new tractor will cost you? That, says George, is the government's affair and they don't need to load their troubles on me when I've plenty of my own. Let the government keep prices down so a body can live."

"Anyway, says George, I don't care if prices keep goin' up. Let 'em rip. I'll get more for my milk and potatoes so it don't matter. And anyway, 'e says, I've got money in the bank, I've got life insurance fer my old age so 'm not worryin' so long as the government leaves me alone. And, I says, 'ow much will your money be worth in your old age if prices keep climbin'? That's hinfation, says George, I'm against hinfation but wot's that got to do with savin' bonds? You'll find out, I says, and left old George standin' on the road, lookin' kind of puzzled."

"Which reminds me," said Mrs. Noggins, "of my Uncle 'Erbert, who was once an alderman in Liverpool till the auditors took a look at the books. 'Erbert was against savin' all principle and it worked out all right because 'e run off with a widow from Manchester and lived 'appily on 'er savin's ever afterwards. Yes, sir, 'e stuck to 'is principles to the last."

Funny and Otherwise

A French visitor declares that North American women are nothing more than dolls. Unfortunately, says the man at the next desk, the talking kind.

Unknown to his wife, the young husband bought a dog kennel when he was out in the country. When it arrived at the home station, the agent phoned and said to the wife, "I have a dog house for your husband."

"How do you like being a married man, Bill?" "Oh, I find that being a husband is just like any other job; it's much easier if you like your boss."

"George, dear, you'll never guess what I got from the butcher's today. I haven't guessed what it is myself, yet."

"The new member claims to be related to you and says he can prove it."

"The man's a fool."

"Yes, but that may be a coincidence."

Lady Customer: "I see this medicine is advertised as good for man and beast."

Druggist: "Yes."

Customer: "Gimme a bottle, I believe it's the right combination to help my husband."

"I take a meal out occasionally but I never go to the same restaurant twice."

"I don't leave a tip, either."

Motor Salesman: "This car is absolutely the last word."

Customer: "Just suit my wife. If there's anything she loves it is the last word."

Announce Date For Manitoba Grain Vote

WINNIPEG.—Agriculture Minister F. G. Bell said Nov. 24 has been set as the date when farmers in Manitoba will decide if they want to continue marketing coarse grains exclusively through the Canadian wheat board.

Proclamation for the coarse grains marketing referendum had been issued under legislation passed at the last session of the legislature.

The question on the ballot will be: "Do you wish to continue to sell your oats and barley as at present?"

The ballot must be marked "yes" or "no".

Generally, those eligible to vote will be actual grain producers and persons entitled to a share of crop under a lease, agreement of sale, or a mortgage, provided such share is payable in grain and not in cash.

Since the compulsory marketing of coarse grains through the wheat board was passed two years ago, much controversy has developed over its benefits.

Premier D. L. Campbell told the Manitoba legislature last April that he had been informed the coarse grains bill would be repealed if farmers showed through the plebiscite that they did not approve the present system.

Mr. Campbell said the vote will be of "utmost importance" to the prairies because rescinding of Manitoba's enabling legislation could conceivably result in scrapping the scheme for Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Will Seek Police From British Isles

EDMONTON, Alta.—Mayor Sidney Parsons says the city will seek police recruits from the British Isles, including the land of the shamrock. It isn't that there aren't enough O'Briens or O'Learys on the force. There just are not enough policemen, he said.

Parsons said Edmonton's police force has been "undermanned by about 15 men during the past two years and it was impossible to find suitable recruits in Canada."

Polio, Triple-Threat Disease Yields, But Slowly, To Science

By DAVID A. HELLER
(CPC Correspondent)

What can you do to guard yourself and your child against attack from polio? How is the war against polio faring? What are some of the points of strength and weakness in man's fight against the paralysis?

To get some down-to-earth answers for parents concerned about the possibility of the disease striking their children, the above questions were put to several eminent scientists, including Dr. Victor G. Haas, Director, Microbiological Institute, U.S. National Institute of Health, a unit of the Public Health Service.

Contrary to popular opinion, polio is not one disease, but three.

It has three closely related strains—Lansing, Brunhille, and Leon. The diseases are caused by different viruses and complicate the scientific fight on the plague enormously.

Polio is a difficult series of diseases upon which to conduct scientific experiments. In scientific terms, the virus is "highly selective" as to the host in which it will grow. Unfortunately, the list includes you and me. Polio occurs naturally only in man and in the higher primates, apes, gorillas and certain monkeys.

These animals are rare and expensive. Laboratory research against polio has been slow and costly as a result.

Perhaps the most heartening advance in the fight on polio in recent years has been the introduction of the Lansing strain of the disease into the cotton rat and the white mouse. This was done at the Microbiological Institute.

If a cheap, plentiful laboratory animal, susceptible to all strains of polio can be found, progress against the disease will be enormously speeded up. Extensive research is being conducted at dozens of medical laboratories, all over America on this problem.

Scientists know that the vast majority of people who reach adulthood harbor the polio viruses. It is possible that most of us have "had" polio in a subclinical form. That is, our cases were so mild that they were not recognized as polio.

According to current medical theory, we may be carriers of the virus and could possibly communicate it to some susceptible person—usually a child—in whom it could erupt in a virulent form. That is the primary difficulty scientists have in controlling polio—nobody knows who could be a carrier and with whom to avoid contact.

The reason polio strikes children more often than adults is that most groups have already been exposed to the disease and have developed an immunity to it.

In years gone by, there was an important difference in the way city people and country people reacted to polio. Rural residents were less likely to get the disease, but once they got it, it was more likely to have it in a virulent form.

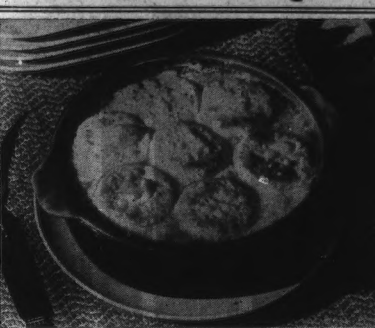

Public health officials report that now, however, North America has become so mobile that this city-country difference no longer exists. Only, of the great hopes against polio is that someone will discover a vaccine similar to that for smallpox, diphtheria and other diseases.

Unfortunately, at present, scientists have no way of growing the virus in the quantities necessary to conduct research in mass experiments to discover a vaccine. If the virus weren't so "selective," we would probably have it whipped by now.

Recently Dr. John F. Enders of Harvard university succeeded in growing a form of polio virus in a tissue culture. This promises fruitful possibilities for future mass production of the virus.

When scientists have found a successful and inexpensive laboratory animal and are able to grow the elusive virus in the large quantities necessary for research purposes, they will probably soon find the key to controlling polio.

Who would think that chicken goes with cheese? This casserole combines the flavor of chicken with a cheese biscuit topping that makes it fine fare for family or guests.

CHICKEN CASSEROLE

One third cup butter, 4 tbsp. flour, 2 cups chicken stock or milk, 2 to 3 cups cooked chicken, salt, pepper, 1 hard cooked egg, cheese biscuit dough.

Melt the butter. Add flour and mix well. Cook without browning. Add chicken stock or milk, a mixture of the two. Cook 20 minutes, stirring to prevent lumping. Add salt and pepper to taste. Arrange chicken meat, sauce, and sliced hard cooked egg in a casserole. Top with cheese biscuits. Bake in a hot oven (425 to 450 degrees F.) for 20 to 30 minutes.

CHEESE BISCUIT
Two cups flour, 3 tsp. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, 4 tbsp. butter.

1 1/2 cups grated cheese, 2/3 to 3/4 cup milk.

Sift flour and measure; add baking powder and salt. Sift a second time. Cut in the butter and one cup of the grated cheese. Add milk to make a soft dough. Place on board and knead very lightly. Roll to one-half inch thickness. Brush with melted or softened butter. Cut with a biscuit cutter. Arrange on top of the casserole. Prick with a fork. Bake in a hot oven (400 to 425 degrees F.) 20 to 30 minutes. The remainder of the cheese may be sprinkled over the top a short time before removing from the oven or as a topping when served.

Terms On New Savings Bonds As Anti-Inflation Measure

—Central Press Canadian.

Laboratory technicians attempt to grow polio virus in eggs. Lack of any means of "mass-producing" virus hampers fight against disease.

WINNIPEG. — Canada savings bonds will be issued under new terms this fall with a view to increasing sales substantially in an anti-inflation measure, C. H. Richardson, deputy secretary of the Bank of Canada, Ottawa, announced in Winnipeg.

The bonds will be taken on a 10-year, nine-month period rather than the previous 10-year bond. Mr. Richardson said. The bond limit under any one name will be raised from $1,000 to $5,000, but can be cashed at any time at full face value.

Main difference lies in the interest returns, he said. Though the bonds will carry the usual 10 coupons, they will not be payable until after a period of one year and nine months, that is, Aug. 1, 1959, when it will be an interest of 3 1/2 per cent.

Each coupon following that will carry the same interest, but for a 12-month period.

(Previous bonds carried a flat 2 1/2 per cent. interest rate.)

"It gives a gradually increasing average yield the longer the bond is held—from an average yearly rate of two per cent. to a yield of 3 1/2 per cent. at the end of the full term," Mr. Richardson said.

"Emphasis is being placed on this new issue because the more these are purchased, the more buying pressure is eased, which is an essential way of supporting other monetary and physical methods of fighting inflation," Mr. Richardson said.

This sixth series of Canada saving bonds will go on sale Oct. 15. Active canvassing for the payroll savings plan will continue about three weeks. The bonds will be sold at par until Nov. 15.

If this bond sale is successful, it would mean a great stroke at some of the root-causes of inflation and material benefits to millions of individuals.

He said that due to the increased limit of $5,000 and attraction of new securities, it is hoped that sales may be higher than in former issues. The last issue reached the $300,000,000 mark.

"Families and individuals are in better shape financially today than they would have been without bonds during the past years," Mr. Richardson said.

A guest at the Fort Garry hotel, he completed arrangements for the bond sale in Winnipeg before continuing west.

Be Yourself If You Meet Royal Pair

LONDON.—How does one behave in the presence of a Princess? What does one say to the prospective consort of a Queen?

These are questions many Canadians, and not a few Americans, are asking as Princess Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, head for Canada and the United States, on a state visit.

There are no hard and fast rules, but advice in the more amiable sectors of court circles is: "be yourself."

Should the ladies curtsy to the royal pair? Canadians on formal occasions curtsy to the Governor-General. So there are sure to be curtsies in Canada to the Princess who almost certainly will one day be the sovereign.

In the United States the descendants of Revolutionists will have to decide for themselves. Some guidance for Americans, for what it's worth, may be drawn from the fact that on royal occasions at any of the royal homes here it is regarded as elemental courtesy to curtsy. At the British Embassy in Washington the Princess will be in a nominal, extra-territorial way, at least—at home. So a curtsy there is defensible for Americans.

But on the street—if by the most unusual chance you should meet her there—skip it. She will smile and bow and the Duke probably will wave cheerfully. You can do the same.

Now, what to talk about? No politics, please. The royal family knows all there is to know about British politics, but traditionally and constitutionally is above it and doesn't talk about it, especially now, with an election campaign going on.

Talk about babies. They've got two. Talk about music, dogs, horses, gardens. Don't be dry, both of them like a joke. To the Duke, talk about ships, he's a sailor man. Talk about motors, he likes speed. He'll chatter about baseball, perhaps, but even better would be cricket and football, the soccer and rugby type.

Best thing to remember is that they're young parents coming on a visit to be friendly.

New Alberta Dam Cuts Down Flood

Project Presents Possibilities For Hydro-Electric Development

EDMONTON.—First major step in controlling the unruly rivers of the High Prairie district of the Peace River valley, an 1,800-foot dam has been completed on the Heart River.

It's a complicated project whereby the dam, four miles east of the eastern tip of Lake Winagami, as diverted the backwash of the West Prairie river and forced the Heart River's upstream flood through a natural creek and reservoir into a 1 1/2 mile diversion canal through Lake Winagami and into a two-mile outlet canal to a creek.

The water now flows four miles down the Heart creek and back into the Heart River.

One aspect of the work is that it has eliminated what one government official called "the corrupting turnip" odor of Lake Winagami, long offensive to district dwellers. The project has raised the lake level by four feet and reduced its high salt content to the point where it is pleasant to drink.

And the fish that once shunned the lake, now are following a clear path from Lesser Slave Lake to Winagami.

It has even increased the duck population in the area. Because of this the organization known as Ducks Unlimited contributed $20,000 towards the Heart River project, total cost of which has not been announced.

The project presents possibilities for hydro-electric development. There is a 75-foot drop between the levels of the Heart River and Winagami Lake and the dam this last spring held back enough water to flood 250,000 acres to a depth of one foot.

Rog Bailey, water resources board engineer in charge of the project, now is studying flood control of the West Prairie River, which each spring floods about 72,000 miles of farmland near High Prairie. The Heart River project may offer a solution to the West Prairie River floods that have been a problem for many years.

The town of McEwen, benefits greatly by the dam. A supply of fresh water may easily be piped to the town from the lake to overcome a perennial water problem. And the town also is talking of building a new summer resort around the reservoir.

He who is afraid of being too generous has lost the power of being magnanimous. The best man or woman is the most unselfish.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Nothing is generous, if it is not at the same time just.—Cicero.

Give for the joy of giving and sing hymns of thankfulness that you have it to give.—Herbert Hoover.

We should be as generous with a man as we are with a picture which we are always willing to give the benefit of the best light.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

To pity distress is but human; to relieve it is Godlike.—Horace Mann.

Helpful Hints

To soften and clean leather furniture use a mixture of one part hot vinegar and two parts linseed oil. Apply this solution with a cloth and rub the leather dry. Then polish with another clean cloth.

When buying beef, check the fat as a guide in getting your money's worth. Better grades will have a moderately-thick covering of firm white or creamy-white fat on the outside. Poorer cuts often have soft or oily fat.

If a medicine bottle has lost its label and you are not sure what the bottle contains, better throw it away for safety's sake. If a label becomes loosened, paste it back on at once.

Plastic piano keyboards can be cleaned with a clean, damp cloth first dipped in warm soapy water and then in clear water. This treatment will keep the keys dust-free and clean to the touch.

Strange Tale Of Oriental Revenge Told

Seven Persons Shot To Death As Result of "Divorce Oath"

CAIRO.—Seven persons were reported shot to death in a strange Arabian nights tale of Oriental revenge. The trouble started the news magazine Al-Habir El-Yom reported, when a village child in the Nile delta area threw a stone at a passing camel.

The stone hit the camel in the eye and blinded that eye. The son of the village mayor—who owned the camel and was riding it at the time—swore an oath to cut the child's throat.

The oath he took is called the "divorce oath." It's the most serious known in this part of the world. If a man does not fulfil a "divorce oath" he must put aside wife and children. He also counselled the father of the child who threw the stone offered to buy the camel to make up for his son's mischief. The mayor's son refused.

The father then consulted the village sheikh or religious leader.

The sheikh advised that the oath could be fulfilled if the mayor's son drew the full edge of a knife over the child's throat. He also counselled that the father should then buy the camel.

Both parties accepted the solution. A village council was called and the child presented his throat to the mayor's son—who held the knife.

The mayor's son applied the dull edge of the knife to the child's throat—then—just as he drew it across he reversed the blade, severing the jugular vein.

But the child's father had been aroused by the suspicions of his wife. He had taken a pistol with him.

When he saw his son's blood spurting, he drew his gun and went amok. He shot the mayor's son, the sheikh and others present before order was restored.

Bangs—1951

Since the snow storm has slowed up threshing and it looks like we might be in for another long winter, and a danger of more bitter weather than last year, I am writing this as a reminder that we will be calling on you very shortly to vaccinate your calves against Bangs. Previously I announced to a number of farmers that we would not start before November 1 in order to give you a chance to clean up your harvesting. This has changed some since the old-man has again blanketed us with an early snow. As I write this our first day work has been organized and we will begin our program tomorrow morning in the Gilt-Edge district.

Last year the program went very smoothly and I wish to thank each and everyone concerned for the wonderful co-operation. There were few stops where accommodations were not too good, but in most cases we were promised better corrals and chutes this year. I would just like to suggest that since you can expect us any day that you can arrange to have the calves handy. With help available it means that we have to spend less time on your premises and you are consequently able to carry on with what you had planned to do. Not only this but we are able to keep closer to a constant schedule and there are less disappointments. Last year there were times when we were criticized severely for arriving hours late and even days late when this could have been avoided if the previous farmers hadn't decided to go to town just then and the calves were still out in the field, or the accommodations were inadequate. I might conclude that if the co-operation is not any worse than last year we won't have much to complain about. As was the custom last year we will take blood tests on request.

CALGARY Power's 62,000 H.P. Spray Hydro Plant goes into operation this week. It is the first of three power plants in the Spray Lakes project, which when completed will have a total capacity of 88,600 H.P.

This new electrical energy will be available not only to the customers served by Calgary Power's 5,000-mile system, but will also add to the total power available to Alberta's integrated power network of interconnected cities and systems. It will assure dependable power for continued expansion of rural electrification, for intensified development of Alberta's oil, for new mills, mines and factories, and for the thousands of homes being built in the villages, towns and cities throughout Alberta.

The placing in operation of this plant is another attestation of Calgary Power's faith in Alberta's future; and is part of the Company's current $30,000,000 expansion program which is being carried out at no cost to the taxpayers.

Check the Stove Pipes

Now is the time to check furnace and stove pipes. Faulty pipes are one of the chief causes of fires on Canadian farms. And while checking the pipes, what about the chimney itself? It can have deteriorated a lot in the past six months and need painting or a new chimney pot. An excellent fire protection on a farm is a roof ladder, for fire often originates around the chimney and the roof.

A few buckets and a number of water barrels at suitable points around farm buildings are often a greater protection than a fire engine many miles away over snow-bound roads. But water barrels are worse than useless if the water is frozen so choose a reasonably warm place to locate them.

The simplest fire-fighting equipment—a bucket of water or sand, a small fire extinguisher, even a horse blanket—if available immediately, can often smother an incipient fire before it becomes a disastrous blaze.

Rise In Wool Prices Affecting Australian Wheat Acreage

11,000,000 Acres Sown Compared To Post-War Peak Of 14,000,000

SYDNEY.—Chiefly as a result of the rise in wool prices since 1948, Australian wheat acreage is falling rapidly. Compared with the post-war peak of nearly 14,000,000 acres in the 1947-48 season, private estimates place the area sown in the new season at not more than 11,000,000 acres.

Experts forecast a sharp decline in overseas trade in wheat, Australia's second greatest export after wool. In each of the last two fiscal years wheat and flour exports were worth £108,000,000 to Australia (the Australian pound is currently about $2.38 Canadian) but in the current year they may fall to £70,000,000.

The decline in wheat acreage has been more pronounced in New South Wales than in any other state. The total Australian acreage in 1950-51 was 14 per cent. lower than 1947-48, and a further substantial decline has been shown this season. In New South Wales alone wheat acreage is about 40 per cent. lower than four years ago.

The changes in wheat and wool prices are the chief factor. Compared with four years ago, wheat prices have dropped about 12 per cent., while wool prices have more than tripled.

In recent years domestic requirements have absorbed about 60,000,000 bushels of wheat annually. The 11,000,000 acres sown this season would normally yield about 140,000,000 bushels. At present seasonal conditions are particularly good throughout Australia and another above-average crop may be harvested.

But the growing season in Australia is different to that of Canada, and it is too early to forecast accurately the harvest of late November and December.

If no more than normal yield per acre is obtained, Australia would have only about 60,000,000 bushels of wheat available for export without drawing on its carry-over stocks.

Australia, however, is committed under the International Wheat Agreement to supply 37,000,000 bushels during this and the next season, and much of its quota for the present I.W.A. year, beginning Aug. 1, is already met. Australia will probably be able to meet its international commitment this year by drawing on its carryover, but the outlook for the future is doubtful.

Further declines in wheat acreage are predicted for next year's crop season unless the wool market collapses, sending more sheep farmers back into wheat. The latter seems most improbable.

Price Of Mink Coats Leave Buyers Cold

HARROWGATE, Eng.—Canadian mink coats flown to this Yorkshire town from Paris caused gasps of astonishment among the women buyers. The prices were in the four-figure bracket.

Examples included a natural Canadian silverblue mink coat costing £2,800, a natural Canadian wild mink at £4,200 and a silverblue short jacket costing £3,170.

Cheapest furs in the collection were priced at £800 and £640.

"Plenty of women in this area can afford expensive furs," said T. J. Patterson, manager of the Harrowgate store who organized the show. "But no inquiries were made."

"English women are so defeatist about furs," said E. J. Jacobs, Paris representative of the furriers.

Harrowgate, a watering-place with wide, terraced streets has long been a favorite residential area for the wealthy factory owners in the industrial Midlands. That is why it was chosen for a show of the type of furs usually seen only in London and Paris.

TRY AND STOP ME!

By BENNETT CREEP

The manufacturer of a phony patent medicine received an unsolicited testimonial that was so rapturous he couldn't believe his eyes. "Your tonic" concluded the letter, "was literally worth ten thousand times its purchase price to me! The gratified manufacturer wrote, 'We're happy you recognize the true worth of our magic elixir. Would you mind telling us from what dealer you purchased it?'"

Back came the answer. "Heck, I didn't purchase it. My uncle did—and I'm his heir."

Three rabbis fell to philosophizing. Said the first, "The young people are the lucky ones. The world is before them. They have verve, enthusiasm, good health." The second said, "I must disagree. Old folks are the luckiest. They have achieved serenity, peace of mind, and freedom from financial strain."

The third rabbi gravely shook his head. "You're both wrong," he declared. "The young people have pain and despair. The old have regrets and bodily aches. No, I believe the luckiest people are those who were never born." Stung by his logic, the first two rabbis indignantly protested. "Granted! But how many people like that do you find in the whole world?"

Sees Alberta As North Texas

NEW YORK.—Time, in a special article on Alberta, likens Canada's oil-rich Western province to a "North Texas."

The current edition of the weekly news magazine carries a four-page color spread of Alberta scenes and a 2,400-word article on the province's oil resources.

"Enthusiastic oilmen envision the Alberta of the future as a Northern Texas whose oil and gas pipelines will fan out over the top half of the continent, driving the expanding industries of Canada and the northern U.S. as the oil and gas of Texas now power the South and East," Time says. "Such a development would make blockaded North America largely self-sufficient in petroleum in case of war."

"Already, Alberta oil is flowing fast enough to fill a third of Canada's needs. It is pipelined across the continent for industrial Ontario; soon, through refineries at Superior and Duluth, it will pour into the oil-hungry areas of Wisconsin and Minnesota. And all this has been accomplished in four years, with only the first big gush from the wells. For Alberta, the brimming best is yet to come."

Japan's Population At 83,200,000

TOKYO.—Japan's population totaled 83,200,000 at the last national census, taken Oct. 1, 1950, it was announced. There are 2,600,000 more women than men.

Tokyo, the world's third largest city, has a population of 6,278,000. The latest statistical report issued to Allied headquarters said the estimated population of Japan last June was 84,200,000—an increase of 1,000,000 since the census.

The phrase, "The Iron Curtain" was originated by H. G. Wells.

A generation ago, the Goumiers, one of North Africa's fiercest tribes, were spear-carrying horsemen. Now, like many of its tribesmen, this Goumier participates in the French army's desert manoeuvres as a skilled communications N.C.O.

Turns Over Business To Employees

CHICAGO.—Louis Ludwig Narowetz, 59, is turning over his $2,500,000 sheet-metal business to his 200 employees. Within five years, by his plan, they will own the company.

Narowetz said he has turned over 48 per cent. of the company's stock to nine executives of the firm who serve as a board of governors. He said he will make the balance of the stock available to employees in a bonus and dividend plan.

"They've earned it," Narowetz said. "I never would have got anywhere without their help."

Miracle Of Snowflakes

American Naturalist Spent 40 Years Photographing Them And Never Found Two To Be Exactly Alike

The quiet grace of snow lying all around us is beautiful indeed and a source of joy to the painter, photographer, skier and tobogganist. Though commonly white in appearance snow in certain parts of the world ranges from red to yellow and even green. In southern Europe, large expanses of snow take on a reddish hue due to the presence in it of a scarlet colored vegetable organism which is found growing to some depth. In Baffin Land, a similar type of plant phenomena gives a greenish effect to the snow. The pollen of fir trees will often transform the mantle of white beneath them into a pale yellow carpet.

Snow is formed when miniature particles of water around the dust in the air freeze. In summer usually only the highest clouds are composed of ice crystals except for large shower or thunder clouds in which hail or snow pellets exist between the water droplets. In winter, however, all the clouds, even the lowest, may be of ice crystals.

When the minute particles freeze, they turn into crystals which vary in size according to the height at which they are frozen. High clouds are of small and compact crystals of low clouds are larger and more feathery ones. Generally speaking, in one particular storm, the crystals are all of the same shape and type.

Hopes To Meet All Alberta Indians

Miss Willa Broderick Will Cover Thousands Of Miles Visiting Reserves

CALGARY.—There are some 15,000 Indians in Alberta and the Northwest Territories. And Willa Broderick, a soft-spoken attractive grey-haired woman, hopes to meet every one of them.

Miss Broderick realizes the ambition will be hard to fulfil but as the Department of Indian Affairs' first welfare worker in Alberta and the Territories, she will cover thousands of miles annually visiting large reserves and small communities.

Miss Broderick will teach the Indians, particularly the younger people, some of the ways of the white man. It is hoped they will then find it easier to be assimilated into society.

She will organize home-making clubs, discussion groups and other means to bring home to the Indians how to get along as individuals in another society.

Miss Broderick explains the idea this way:

"There are a great many things in our way of life entirely unsuitable to the Indians. It's unwise to try making them accept these. And the Indians have many things in their culture worth perpetuating."

Miss Broderick has spent six years as home economics teacher among Indians in Ontario and was with the British Columbia Welfare Department.

Babysitters At 34c A Day On Mexican Ranch

Babysitters at 34 cents a day is only one of the bargains offered at a dude ranch in this mountain retreat of Saultillo, Mexico.

El Morillo Ranch is complete with swimming pool, horses, and lots of peons to do the heavy work, and its rates are enough to startle the vacationists. They're so reasonable.

The ranch is operated by the Aristocratic Mexican family which leads a quiet dignified life as it runs the family home as a dude ranch.

Once you move into the family's hacienda, or one of the rooms in an L-shape court around it, you're a member of the family. Life is easy and informal. Breakfast after 9 a.m., lunch at 2 p.m., dinner at 8 or sometimes later.

Occasionally a fiesta or a children's birthday party will break the siesta-like routine.

Only in Mexico could such a ranch exist and it wasn't planned. It just sprouted and grew like the mango and papaya trees just grow on its 300 acres.

The Rodriguez family was financially crippled in the revolution. Its holdings reduced to 300 acres and hacienda, it turned toward the dude ranch as the only way to make ends meet.

The ranch is still run like a ranch. Sheets and towels are washed daily in tubs of water heated over a fire beside a mountain stream. Then the linen is hung on cactus plants to dry. Eight peon families in the hills and orchards raise fruits and vegetables and care for the milk cows and horses.

The ranch, in the family for 280 years, can accommodate 300 guests in its 14 rooms.

Just two kilometers from Saultillo it is a four-hour drive from the Texas border. Elevation is 5,400 feet and the summertime temperatures generally are cooler than Denver's.

Liquid fire was first used in war by the Byzantines.

Claims Canadians Going Soft

VANCOUVER, B.C.—The Rt. Rev. Donald Marsh, Bishop of the Arctic, charged Canadians were going soft and lacked the stamina to work in their own northland today.

The Anglican bishop said he had as much difficulty getting Canadian ministers to work among the Eskimos as his own. For Company officials and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police had in getting recruits to serve in the bushland.

"Canadians won't put up with hardship," he said. "They act as though they were born with a silver spoon in their mouths."

Bishop Marsh said only two Canadians were among the 18 ordained ministers in his parish, which covers nearly half of the northwest territories.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

A Night Like This

Wedding Plans — Nothing Less Than Bacon and Eggs — By VICTOR di CASTRI

"BUT Sally, you love me. You can't sacrifice your own happiness just because you feel you can't leave your sister alone in the world. Peggy's young and pretty and she's got a good job—she'll be all right."

Sally smiled wanly. How many times Bob had said that. She watched his grim, harassed face and his fingers clenching on the steering wheel. They had been to a movie and had been parked outside Sally's apartment for about fifteen minutes, but to Sally it seemed as if they spent most of their lives in the blue coupe trying to figure out a way to get married and at the same time not leave Peggy alone.

Bob put his arm around Sally. His dark, handsome face reflecting his earnestness. "Sally, you said yourself that Peggy has turned down several proposals. What about Mike Hogan?"

Sally was embarrassed. How could she tell Bob that Peggy had a lot of fancy ideas and wanted to marry wealth and position; she had told her so. Sally evaded the question by saying, "Oh, they had some kind of a disagreement and it fizzled out."

But Bob was insistent. "Well, he wasn't the only one. What about the others? What is she waiting for, a prince charming on a white horse?"

Sally shifted uneasily on the worn leather seat. She could see that he was going to lose his temper. She couldn't blame him, but she was tired and frustrated herself and she knew that if he persisted they would probably have another fight. It seemed crazy that she should fight with Bob when she loved him so much.

Sally moved over impulsively and kissed Bob on the corner of the mouth. "I'm going to go now, Bob. We're both tired. Maybe something will turn up."

"Maybe," Bob stormed. He was angry and made no attempt to conceal it.

Her heart cried out for him but she reached for the door, stole one last glance at him, then stepped out of the car and ran.

She was at the large oaken door of the apartment building before she heard Bob pull the car door shut, but there was no sound of the car starting.

Litely she walked up the flight of steps to her apartment and let herself in. She was glad that Peggy had received that invitation to go out tonight. Right now Sally wanted to be alone. Very much alone.

For the first time her love for her sister was clouded with a little resentment. Oh why hadn't Peggy married Mike Hogan? It was all very well to want to reach for the moon but most people had to be content with considerably less.

When Sally had spent herself crying she forced herself to laugh resignedly. She went over to the black book at the side of the phone. It was a wild chance but it was the only straw left to grasp. She went down the list of names until she came to Mike's. It was a nice name and he was a nice guy. But would he be in? Most men wouldn't hang around a boarding house at night. But it was getting late. Maybe he was back now.

Breathlessly she dialed the number and asked the landlady at the other end, "Is Mr. Hogan in—by any chance?"

"I'll go and see," the voice answered.

Sally's throat was dry. How was she going to broach the subject of Peggy?

And then Mike answered, but it was only after he repeated "Who is it?" a second time that she managed to tell him who she was. "Can you come over, right away?" she stammered.

If Mike thought her request unusual he concealed the fact. "Sure. Sure, I'll be right over."

She had coffee on by the time he arrived. Nervously she said, "I'm so glad you could come."

"That's O.K., Sally, what's up?"

Sally knew that she shouldn't hesitate to tell him about Peggy but just the same it was difficult to find just the right opening. "Mike—"

she began—

And then the door opened, and there was Peggy. And Bob was with her. Peggy looked at her sister in surprise and then at Mike and exclaimed, "Mike! Mike, what are you doing here?"

She started to run to wards him but changed her mind.

Mike was on his feet, but it was Bob who stepped forward. He took Sally's hand firmly and announced, "Peggy, I've had enough of this beating around the bush. Sally and I are going to get married. Right away."

An expression of consternation clouded Peggy's face. "But Sally—"

Bob was unyielding. "Peggy, we want your consent."

Peggy appeared stunned. But only for a moment, because the next, Mike had scooped her in his arms and started dancing around the room.

Sally looked at Bob with wondering eyes.

When Sally and Mike's joyous laughter had subsided, Peggy pointed a finger at her sister and laughing said to Mike, "She wants my consent—"

Bob appeared perplexed but still angry. "What's so funny?"

"What's so funny?" Peggy asked almost hysterically, "why I gave Mike up thinking that you would never get around to asking Sally to marry you."

When they all finally got tired of talking about their happy, crazy wedding plans, they decided that they needed more tea coffee on a night like this. Nothing less than bacon and eggs would do. Especially if Peggy and Mike went into the kitchen and left Sally alone with Bob.
